THE rapid sale of my "Latin Terminations" (or "Clue for young Latinists") has inspired me with a hope that this little volume of Greek Terminations, compiled on a similar plan, will experience an equally favorable reception from the public, as offering useful aid to the young student in surmounting the difficulties which the Greek language presents to him in the vast variety of its inflexions, particularly in the Dialects and Poetic Licences.

While he enjoys the expected benefit, I wish him to remember, that, to Davies Gilbert, Esq. M.P. he stands, in great measure, indebted for it; that gentleman having (as in the case of the "Latin Terminations") originally suggested the idea, and, by a spontaneous act of munificence, promoted its execution. — At his express desire, I undertook the compilation, for the use of his son, Mr. John Davies Gilbert, a promising youth, now in his tenth year, who, having already made a creditable proficiency in the Latin language, intends soon to enter on the study of the Greek.

The general plan of the work requires no explanation; a single glance at any one page being sufficient to show its nature and use. A few particulars, however, it may be proper to notice.

1. As the declensions have been differently distributed and numbered by different grammarians, and I wished to avoid clashing with any of the existing grammars, I have, therefore, divided the nouns into three “classes,” corresponding with the first three Latin declensions — a distribution readily understood, and easily remembered; the first class comprising the parisyllabics in -α, -ας, -η, -ης (Μῆσα, Φιλία, Ταμίας, Τιμή, Τελωνής, as, in Latin, Musa, Æneas, Nymphe, Anchises) — the second being confined to the parisyllabics in -ος and -ον (Λογος, Ξυλον,* as, in Latin, Dominus, Regnum, Paphos, Barbiton) — the third embracing all the imparisyllabics, of whatever termination, forming the genitive in -ος, or Attic -ως, (as, in Latin, all those forming the genitive in -IS.)

2. With respect to the Dialects — Without descending to un-important subdivisions, I have contented myself with that general division of the language into Common, Attic, Ionic, Doric, and Poetic, which is sufficiently sanctioned by the authority of Busbey and Maittaire; to the latter of whom I am bound to acknowledge my obligations; having minutely searched his “Greek Dialects,” page by page, and freely borrowed from him whatever suited my purpose; insomuch that his work does not (I think) contain any one dialectic form of termination worthy of notice, which I have not included in this little volume.

3. As to the Accents — Although they might well be dispensed with in a work confined to terminations, I have thought right to retain the Circumflex, because (as a visible mark, independent of pronunciation) it may sometimes usefully serve to distinguish tenses and voices, or verbs from nouns, as Τυποῖμι aorist, from Τυποῖμι future — Τυπῇ passive, from Τυπῇ active — Φιλεῖ indicative, from Φιλεῖ imperative — Φιλοῖ verb, from Φιλοῖ, noun substantive, &c.

To conclude — As this is, I believe, (with the exception of my “Latin Terminations”) the first publication of the kind hitherto attempted, I hope the candid reader will indulgently pardon any imperfections which he may discover in it: and, even if found less perfect than might be wished, I flatter myself that it will nevertheless prove eminently serviceable to the youthful student.

P. S. Having some vacant space here remaining, I avail myself of it, to furnish the young Grecist with a few general hints respecting the Augments of Verbs — referring him to his Grammar and Lexicon for more minute particularities, exceptions, and anomalies.

(1.) Epsilon, prefixed to a verbal form, marks the Preterimperfect, the first and the second AORIST, of a verb commencing with a consonant, as Εγραφον, Imperfect of Γραφω — Ελεξα, first Aorist of Λεγω — Ετυπον, second Aorist of Τυπτω. — Sometimes also it is prefixed to the preterite of a verb beginning with a vowel, as Ἐωρων, and Ἐωρανα, Attic for Ἦρων (or Ἦραον) and Ἦρανα, preterimperfect and perfect of Ἦραω. — It also marks the Pluperfect, when prefixed to any of those duplications noticed below in section 8, as Εγεγραφειν, pluperfect of Γραφω.

(2.) Ei marks the preterites of some verbs commencing with Epsilon, as Εἰχον, preterimperf. of Εχω — Ειργαζομην, imperf. of Εργάζομαι — Ειρηκα, perfect of Ερεω. — Sometimes also, in the Attic dialect, the diphthong Ει is used instead of the duplicate augment in the Preterperfect of verbs beginning with Λ or Μ, as Ειληφα for Δεληφα, from Λαμβανω — Ειμαρμαι for Μεμαρμαι, from Μειρομαι.

(3.) Epsilon, followed by double Rhô, marks the preterite of a verb beginning with Rhô, as Ερῖεν from 'Ρεω.

(4.) Simple Eta marks the preterites of verbs commencing with Alpha, Epsilon, or the diphthong ΑΥ, as Ηγον, Ηχα, preterimperfect and perfect of Αγω — Ηῤελον and Ηῤεληκα from Εῤελω — Ηυξανον from Αυξανω. — Sometimes the Attic dialect assumes the Eta, instead of Epsilon, before a consonant, as Ημελλον, for Εμελλον, from Μελλω — and sometimes changes the diphthong Ευ to Ηυ, as Ηυτυχησα for Ευτυχησα, from Ευτυχεω.

(5.) Eta, with Iöta subscript, marks the preterites of verbs commencing with ΑΙ, as ητεον, ητηκα, ητησα, from Αιτεω.

(6.) Simple O-mega marks the preterites of verbs beginning with O-micron, as Ωρυσσον, Ωρυχα, from Ορυσσω.

(7.) O-mega, with Iöta subscript, marks the preterites of verbs commencing with the diphthong ΟΙ, as ωκίζον, from Οικίζω.

(8.) An initial consonant, followed by Epsilon and the same consonant repeated, as Βεβ..., Γεγ..., Δεδ..., &c., or the corresponding aspirate, as Κεχ..., Περ..., Τεθ..., marks the preterperfect of a verb beginning with the latter consonant, as Βεβιωκα from Βιω — Γεγραφα from Γραφω — Δεδηλωκα from Δηλωω — Κεχρημαι from Χραομαι — Πεφιληκα from Φιλεω — Τεθνηκα from Θνησκω — or what is called the Paulo-post Future, as Τετυφομαι. — Sometimes the poets give this duplicate augment to other tenses, as Πεπιθον for Επιθον, second Aorist — Πεπιθησω, for Πιθησω, first future — and even carry it beyond the Indicative, into the other moods, as Κεκαμω for Καμω, 2d Aorist subjunctive — Τετυπων for Τυπων, Participle, 2d Aorist.

ERRATUM.

In page 4, line 4 from the bottom, for  $\grave{\eta}$  of 1st class, read  $\eta$  of 1st class — the grave accent, instead of the circumflex.
